

MLA - Magazine

MLA (Modern Language Association) is an author-page number style, based on listing core elements of your source in a particular order. It has the flexibility to reference a wide variety of source materials. A summary of this approach is available at Purdue OWL, and a practice template is available at style.mla.org \(practice template \).

Works Cited

Add a 'Works Cited' list at the end of your essay, citing all sources used in the body of your writing.

For a numbered edition, place the abbreviation after the book title, eg '2nd ed.' This part should not be italicised. Use 'Rev. ed.' for revised editions and 'Abr. ed.' for abridged editions.

Include the DOI number (Digital Object Identifier), if the book has one, and add the name of the database where applicable. The DOI resolver can be used to find a DOI from the citation details if it is not given on the publication. If there is no DOI assigned, MLA 8 recommends adding the URL, even though it may change, as it may still be possible to find the source from an outdated URL. Use a permalink if possible and omit http://www.

One author

Formats (Electronic)

Formats (Print)

Be as specific as you can with the date of publication. The year of publication may be preceded by the name of an edition, eg 'Spring 2015.'

In-text citation

Cite the source when paraphrasing another person's ideas or words. Either add parenthesised author and page number following the cited material, or if you name the author in the structure of your text, just add the page number at the end of your sentence. When citing material from the same author in the same paragraph, only the page number is needed, as long as the work cannot be confused with other citations.

One author

- ... it was the case as shown in a recent study (Smith 125). His other finding was that pass rates increased (128).

Three or more authors

When the work has three or more authors, either cite all names as they appear on the title page, or only the first author, followed by et al.
